

Coronavirus airport announcement – Melbourne and Sydney international airports only (including information on New Zealand flights)

This is an important health announcement from the Australian Government regarding coronavirus.

If you are feeling sick and have a fever, cough, sore throat, or are having difficulty breathing, please speak to a biosecurity officer now.

Travellers may be required to undergo health screening in the terminal. You must follow the direction of the health professional, who may require you to go to hospital.

Please be patient during this process and please practise physical distancing of 1.5 metres whilst in the terminal.

Travellers arriving from New Zealand in the green zone who are intending to travel to other states and territories should check local requirements prior to travelling. Some state and territory governments may require travellers from safe zone countries to quarantine on arrival.

Do not film or take photos of any Government official.

Please visit the Department of Health's website for further information.

Thank you for your cooperation.
