AWI as a body representing wool producers in my opinion has left prime lamb producers behind somewhat. I would like to see more attention spent on genetics that focus on wool and meat, in regards to marketing I would like to see the whole of animal marketing not just the finer end of wool. A lot has been done to help with the prevention of wild dog attacks which is fantastic however stock theft is also a serious industry issue and could have more time spent on it. Let's get on with phasing out mulsing. While I don't have a full grasp on the governance of AWI from my point of view I feel there are serious issues that mean producers are missing out due internal politics. Regards, Tim
