

Chris Thomson

It has taken a long time for wool to be a valuable commodity, I applaud AWI for sticking with the actions involving fashion, mulsing, shearing, live shipping among many others problem fronts over the years. The leadership shown by AWI under the chairmanship of Mr Wally Merriman has been extremely effective, this being carried out under continued pressure from under all different parties around the world. Upon seeing this over many years and now realizing the work done and that work being rewarded for all growers it is time to take stock and thank these members of AWI for there great foresight. As I was in attendance at the world merino forum in Uruguay the future is good and sound for woolgrowers. With many new fibres and promotions being created the only thing threatening our future is world stability. This can be said about many industries. Finally AWI has struggled over time but that work is finally coming to fruition. Thank you